

Buono Appetito (from the recording, Hello World)

A great book to go along with this song is: Hungary Planet: What the World Eats by Peter Menzel and Faith D'Aluisio

1. After listening to the song, “Buono Appetito,” make a classroom list of each student’s favorite food on chart paper. Read to the class, Hungary Planet: What the World Eats. Have students compare foods on their classroom list with the foods listed in the book. How many countries like the same kinds of food? (intermediate levels)
2. List the food pyramid on the board. Students can match the foods named in Red’s song, “Buono Appetito”, to the correct spot on the pyramid chart. (intermediate levels)

3. The book the Hungary Planet: What the World Eats lists the costs of food in a country for one week. Make a grocery list of what your family eats and the cost. Compare with the country you are studying. (intermediate levels)
4. Draw a picture of your family around the table. Draw a picture of what foods your family likes to eat. Compare that to Red’s song. Do you have anything that is in the song, “Buono Appetito” that is also on your list? (all levels)
5. If there is a food mentioned in Red’s song that you have never tried? What is it? Would you try it? Why or why not? (all levels)